

Help arthritis research and learn about online shopping at the same time

A special Hackney Stream workshop about online shopping – for local older people – with researchers from the Helen Hamlyn Design Centre

When and where

- Tuesday afternoon 25 April, 2 to 5 pm
- Whitmore Community Centre, 2-4 Phillipp Street, N1 5NU
- Map and directions are on the other side.

Why you should come

- You would like to learn something interesting, and do something useful that will help older arthritis sufferers.
- You don't have to be an arthritis victim yourself (the researchers just want to find out how older people use online shopping sites).
- You are an older person yourself (the older the better, but at least 50).
- You have a general interest or curiosity about online shopping. Internet beginners will fit in very well.
- You don't have to be an experienced online shopper, and you definitely don't have to know much about computers or the Internet.

More information – on the other side

At the workshop

You will use our laptops or tablets to access and test three shopping sites (Amazon, Spring Chicken and Joseph Joseph) from the point of view of an older person who does not know much about online shopping.

Afterwards, you will have a better understanding of how to use shopping websites – and you will have made a genuine contribution to helping research (that will be explained during the workshop).

How to book your workshop place

It's best to reserve your place if you can.

Send an email to workshops@hackneystream.net, stating that you would like a workshop place – or phone Rick on 07761 887927
